Performance data quoted represents past performance. Past performance does not guarantee future results. All performance assumes the reinvestment of dividends and capital gains, and represents returns of the Investor Class shares. The investment return and principal value of an investment will fluctuate so that an investor's shares, when redeemed, may be worth more or less than their original cost. Current performance may be lower or higher than the performance data quoted. Performance data current to the most recent month-end for Ariel Focus Fund may be obtained by visiting our website, arielinvestments.com. For the period ended September 30, 2022 the average annual returns of Ariel Focus Fund (investor class) for the 1, 5, and 10 year periods were -14.91%, +3.88%, and +7.51%, respectively.

Quarter Ended September 30, 2022

All major indices closed out the third quarter at a loss, marking the first time Wall Street posted three consecutive quarters of declines since the aftermath of the global financial crisis. Persistently high inflation, escalating geopolitical tensions in Russia/Ukraine, energy-price shocks and aggressive central-bank tightening have weighed on consumer and business confidence. Recession watch has taken hold as many investors fear a Fed-induced hard landing. While Wall Street sits on edge and markets remain erratic, we are actively leaning into the moment by judiciously acquiring the downtrodden shares of quality companies whose value we believe should be realized over the long term. Against this backdrop, Ariel Focus Fund declined -7.45% in the quarter, trailing the -5.62% return posted by Russell 1000 Value Index and the -4.88% loss of the S&P 500 Index.

Several stocks in the portfolio had strong returns in the quarter. Regional banking services provider BOK Financial Corporation (BOKF) advanced in the quarter, as reflation themes in the marketplace raised interest rate expectations, boosting positive net-interest-margin trends. Additionally, the company continued to report solid loan growth along with tight expense controls, providing a tailwind for shares. Looking ahead, we believe BOKF's strong underwriting standards, diversified business model (which includes banking and fee service businesses) and experienced management team continue to present a long-term opportunity.

Shares of orthotic and prosthetic (O&P) specialist Hanger, Inc. (HNGR) traded significantly higher in the quarter. The company announced plans to go-private and be acquired by a private equity firm in an all-cash transaction.

Producer and marketer of crop nutrients Mosaic Co. (MOS) also traded up in the period on solid financial results. MOS continues to demonstrate its ability to raise prices and offset input cost inflation, as well as return significant capital to shareholders through buybacks. Meanwhile, trade flows have shifted with Russia and Belarus, the second and third largest fertilizer exporters globally, banning exports and facing sanctions imposed by the West. As a result, MOS is expanding production to help meet global demand. Given management's optimistic outlook and disciplined approach towards capital allocation, we continue to believe the company is well-positioned from a risk/reward standpoint.

By comparison, shares of leading manufacturer and distributor of medical devices specializing in spine and dental products ZimVie, Inc. (ZIMV) sharply declined in the quarter, following a downward revision in full-year guidance. Over the long-term, we believe the foreign exchange headwinds the company is facing will soften and expect the management team to enhance its focus on research and development, as well as expand the product portfolio across its core value chain.

Leading manufacturer and distributor of floorcovering products Mohawk Industries Inc. (MHK) also detracted from relative returns in the quarter. MHK has consistently demonstrated its ability to deliver sales growth and generate strong cash flow despite significant inflation, rising interest rates and geopolitical instability. However, this quarter was an inflection point as the slowing U.S. housing market began to change consumer discretionary spend. Higher natural gas prices and constrained supply in Europe presented another headwind. Given these factors, MHK guided to softening demand and increasing pressure on margins moving forward. Management initiated corrective actions across the enterprise including implementing further price increases, enhancing service levels and restructuring to reduce costs. In our view, MHK's track record of success managing through economic cycles and healthy balance sheet have the company well-positioned to benefit from long-term growth in residential remodeling, new home construction and commercial projects. At current levels, MHK is trading at a -67% discount to our estimate of private market value.

Global leader in money transfer services Western Union Company (WU) also traded lower in the period on mixed earnings results. Softness in retail money transfer resulted in weaker than expected revenues, however, operating profit margin expansion drove a bottom-line beat. Management also continues to return capital to shareholders through dividends and share repurchases. Although the company anticipates the macroeconomic environment will continue to slow, it reminded investors remittances have proved resilient in prior periods of economic contraction. At current levels, WU is trading at a -41% discount to our estimate of private market value.

We initiated three new positions in the quarter. We added leading financial institution Bank of America Corporation (BAC) which serves individual consumers, small and middle-market businesses, and large corporations with a full range of banking, investing, asset management, and other financial and risk management products and services. The current company was formed through various mergers including NationsBank, FleetBoston, US Trust, Countrywide Financial, and Merrill Lynch with the legacy commercial bank to form a national banking powerhouse and bulge bracket investment firm. As one of the 'Big Four' U.S. banks it enjoys scale driven cost advantages and economies of scale which provide meaningful competitive advantages and potential for strong returns in the largely commoditized banking industry. A survivor of the financial crisis, BAC has emerged with a solid capital base and stands to benefit from a rising interest rate environment.

We also bought shares of two companies held in other Ariel portfolios, leading global manufacturer of power generation equipment Generac Holdings, Inc. (GNRC) and bar-code manufacturer Zebra Technologies (ZBRA). GNRC has an unmatched distribution network and product portfolio and enjoys strong brand advantages. We believe this creates a wide moat for this niche business which commands a 75% market share in the North American residential market. Historically, growth has been limited due to a lack of awareness around the benefits of having a home standby generator, as well as its high price point. More recently, however, elevated power outage events, both weather-related and due to aging infrastructure, have tipped the scales of awareness in both the residential and commercial markets, which should result in a long-runway of market penetration-led growth, margin expansion and free cash flow generation. The stock was a pandemic darling but has since traded off substantially giving us an opportunity to acquire shares in this unique, high-quality business.

Meanwhile, ZBRA's brand strength, distribution network and commitment to innovation enable it to take share, earn industry-leading profitability and penetrate new markets. A recent pullback in stock price provided an attractive entry point. Shares have come under pressure due to investor concerns around inflation and supply chain disruptions. At current valuation levels, we think investors are underappreciating ZBRA's alignment with the global effort to improve supply chain efficiency. At the same time, the company is leveraging the wide moat in its core business to expand into faster growing markets including warehouse robotics and machine vision. Meanwhile ZBRA continues to deliver prodigious free cash flow which we believe will continue to be deployed towards both growth and share repurchases.

By comparison, we exited our positions in Stanley Black & Decker, Inc. (SWK) and leading manufacturer of consumer food products J.M. Smucker Company (SJM) on valuation. We also sold out of Hanger, Inc. (HNGR) upon its decision to go-private and leading entertainment company Paramount Global (PARA) to pursue other opportunities.

Escalating geopolitical tensions, persistently high inflation, slowing economic growth and the potential for excessive Fed tightening continue to fuel recessionary fears. And yet, we view the probability of the most severe “hard landing,” or deep recession, to be less likely. Unemployment remains near historic lows and balance sheets of U.S. financial institutions and households are generally in good shape. We continue to be cautiously optimistic these factors will protect against a severe downturn. Meanwhile, values are abundant when the investment environment feels the most uncomfortable. With 39 years of experience, we are trained and battle-tested for these moments. We believe bear markets and oversold stocks create ripe buying opportunities for long-term, patient investors. We are diligently evaluating the collapsing prices of stocks on our watchlist versus our expectations of what these companies and their underlying business fundamentals should be valued at over the long-term. In times like these, we believe the worst-case scenario gets priced in giving us a margin of safety¹ to buy and hold our favorite companies with confidence through the uncertainty until the market digests the volatility. Although our portfolios have sold off in recent months, in our view they are statistically cheap—trading at a significant discount to their private market values (PMV)²—or what some call intrinsic worth. In the past, portfolio dislocations of this magnitude have often served as a prelude to our most robust recoveries.

Investing in equity stocks is risky and subject to the volatility of the markets. Investing in small and mid cap companies is riskier and more volatile than investing in large cap companies. The intrinsic value of the stocks in which the Fund invests may never be recognized by the broader market. Ariel Focus Fund is a non-diversified fund and therefore may be subject to greater volatility than a more diversified investment. The Fund is often concentrated in fewer sectors than its benchmarks, and its performance may suffer if these sectors underperform the overall stock market.

Per the Fund’s Annual Report for the year ended September 30, 2021, the Fund’s Investor Class had an annual net expense ratio of 1.00% and an annual gross expense ratio of 1.20%. Currently, expense ratio cap of 1.00% for the Investor Class is in place to waive fees and reimburse certain expenses that exceed this cap. Ariel Investments, LLC (the Adviser) is contractually obligated to maintain this expense ratio cap through 9/30/23.
